MAJOR STEDMAN'S ADDRESS.

GEN. MACRAE AND REAM'S STATION

The Wonderful Charge of Lane's, Cooke's and MacRae's Brigades--Pelham's Gallant Reversal of the Order of Artillery Fighting--No Soldier Failed to go Where MacRae Said Go--"All Right, General, We'll Do It."

"At any rate one can remark that no nation will throw by its work and deliberately go out to make a scene without meaning something thereby."

With the above ornate and beautifully expressed sentence from Carlyle's history of the French Revolution Maj. Charles M. Stedman this morning begun his splendid address on the life and character of Gen. William MacRae and the battle of Ream's Station.

Referring to the sentiment with which the Southern people were imbued when they set up the Confederacy, the speaker said: "When a whole people leave their vocations and quit their habitations to express their appreciation of any great cause, or of the achievement of any man, or testify their faith by their universal presence, they may be mistaken in their estimate of the hero whom they salute, or the righteousness of the cause they espouse, but the sentiments they profess come from hearts honest in the belief which prompts them to action."

Major Stedman paid a high but just tribute to the memory of General MacRae, declaring him to have been a "man whose attributes placed him in the vanguard of the great and noble, made him a model and type of the soldiery of the State which gave him birth, and whose splendid achievements have shed imperishable lustre upon its armies."

General William MacRae was the son of General Alexander MacRae and was born in Wilmington on September 9th, 1834. His paternal ancestors came from a wild and picturesque region in the western highlands of Scotland and were descendents of the Pre Celts, or Gaels, who have given Scotland its national character. Their genealogy can be traced back to Ciric, or Grig, or McRath, who was slain on the banks of the Earn, in the early part of the twelfth century.

The beginning of the war between the States found General MacRae stationed at Monroe, N. C., where he was engaged as a civil engineer on the Carolina Central Railroad. He at once enlisted as a private in the Monroe Light Infantry, of which company he was soon elected captain, and assigned to the Fifteenth North Carolina Regiment, which was attached to Cobb's brigade. Later, with his regiment, he was transferred to Cook's brigade. He was promoted several times, and in August, 1864, was made a brigader-general. Shortly before this time he was ordered to Kirkland's brigade, Gen. J. Johnston Pettigrew's command. So unbounded was the confidence of the brigade in its commander that it deemed no foe too numerous to be assailed, nor any position too strong to be assaulted, if the order came from General William McRae.

The close of the war found him penniless, but he was soon appointed general superintendent of the Wilmington and Manchester Railroad, later of the Macon and Brunswick Railroad and afterwards assuming the management of the State road of Georgia. In each of these positions he displayed the highest order of ability. His iron constitution was wrecked by incesant labor, and he died in Augusta, Ga., on February 11th, 1882, at the age of 47 years.

Major Stedman next spoke of the elements of character displayed by General MacRae as a military character. He possessed military talent of the highest order and was a singularly modest and unobtrusive man, whose chief aim was to do his duty. He fell frequently under the personal observation of General Lee, who repeatedly expressed his appreciation of his capacity and services, and it was well understood that he was to be made a major-General. The rapid commencement of hostilities in the spring of 1865 and early termination of the war alone prevented his receiving that commission.

General MacRae's estimate of men was singularly accurate. It was seen in his selection of subordinates for the positions for which they were peculiarly adapted. He could not tolerate cowardice. * * * He was an unselfish man. He neither sought nor would have luxuries whilst his men were suffering privation and hardship.

The remainder of Major Stedman's address was taken up with a description of the battle of Ream's Station, to the brilliant and successful result of which engagement General MacRae's regiment contributed so largely. This fine description of the battle we quote verbatim:

But I must pass over many fields that I may mention Ream's Station, which I am asked to notice somewhat fully. This engagement was fought on the 25th of August, 1864. Upon the investment of Petersburg the possession of the Weldon road became of manifest importance, as it was Lee's main line of communication with the South, whence he drew his men and supplies. On the 18th of August, 1864, General G. K. Warren, with the 5th corps of Grant's army, and Kautz's division of cavalry, occupied the line of the Weldon road at a point six miles from Petersburg. An attempt was made to dislodge them from this position on the 21st, but the effort failed. Emboldened by Warren's success, Hancock was ordered from Deep Bottom to Ream's Station, ten miles from Petersburg. He arrived there on the 22d and promptly commenced the destruction of the railroad track. His infantry force consisted of Gibbons' and Miles' divisions, and in the afternoon of the 25th he was reinforced by the division of Orlando B. Wilcox, which however arrived too late to be of any substantial service to him. Gregg's division of cavalry, with an additional brigade commanded by Spear, was with him. He had abundant artillery, consisting in part of the 10th Massachusetts battery, battery B, 1st Rhode Island, McNight's 12th New York battery, and Woerner's 3d New Jersey battery. On the 22d Gregg was assailed by Wade Hampton with one of his cavalry divisions, and a sharp contest ensued. Gen. Hampton, from the battle-field of the 22d, sent a note to General R. E. Lee, suggesting an immediate attack with infantry. That great commander, realizing that a favorable opportunity was offered to strike Hancock a heavy blow, directed Lieut-Gen. A. P. Hill to advance against him as promptly as possible. Gen. Hill left his camp near Petersburg on the night of the 24th, and marching south, halted near Armstrong's Mill, about eight miles from Petersburg. On the morning of the 25th he advanced to Monk's Neck Bridge, three miles from Ream's Station, and awaited advices from Hampton. The Confederate force actually present at Ream's Station, consisted of Cooke's and MacRae's brigates of Heth's divisions, Lane's, Scales' and McGowan's brigades of Wilcox's division, Anderson's brigade of Longstreet's corps, two brigades of Mahone's division, Butler's and W. H. F. Lee's divisions of cavalry, and a portion of Pegram's battalion of artillery. General Hampton, commanding cavalry, marched at daylight on the morning of the 25th and drove the Federal cavalry before him at all points. Both his divisions united at Malone's Crossing, about two and one half miles from Ream's Station, having moved against the enemy by different routes. Here Hamptnn was attacked by a portion of Hancock's infantry, when he dismounted his entire force and a spirited fight was in progress when the columns of A. P. Hill appeared in sight, with the purpose of attacking Hancock's force from the front. Hancock's infantry who were expecting an attack from Hill, had entrenched themselves strongly on the west side of the railroad and a short distance from it. Hill ordered the first assault about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The assaulting column consisted of Anderson's Georgia brigade and Scales' North Carolina brigade. These two brigades, after a severe conflict in which both fought well, were repulsed. The second assault was made about 5 o'clock in the afternoon by the three North Carolina brigades of Lane, Cooke and MacRae from left to right in the order named. These troops had become famous throughout the entire army for their

MEMORIAL DAY EXERCISES.

A NUMBER OF VETERANS IN LINE.

The Efforts of the Daughters Crowned With Success--Inspiring Music and an Eloquent Oration--A Dainty Luncheon Served.

The Daughters of the Confederacy must feel grateful that the Memorial Day exercises, which were under their auspices, were crowned with success.

At 10 o'clock the Gate City band escorted the veterans from the court house, where they had assembled and formed in line, to the Academy of Music, where the principle part of the exercises took place.

The interior of the Academy of Music was gracefully draped in red and white bunting, and the stage, besides being prettily festooned with this, was decorated with cut flowers. On the right and left of the rostrum were pictures of Lee and Jackson.

Maj. Charles M. Stedman, the orator of the occasion, accompanied by Col. J. T. Morehead, preceded the veterans, entered amid the applause always accorded these heroes of the '60's.

Rev. Dr. E. W. Smith opened the exercises with a beautiful and impressive prayer.

Next on the programme were two selections by the band—"Columbia" and "Dixie."

This was followed by a quartette, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," which was rendered by Messrs. Alderman, Younts, Wheeler and Wills.

To Col. Morehead was assigned the honor of introducing the speaker, which he did in a few appropriate words.

Major Stedman's address on "The Life and Character of Gen. William MacRae," followed by a description of the battle of Ream's Station, contained much of historical interest and was delivered in his own peculiarly happy and eloquent manner. An extended report of the speech will be found elsewhere in this paper.

The address was followed by a charming and appropriate recitation by Miss Lucie Stone.

The exercises at the Academy of Music were concluded by "Carolina," sung by the school children and audience.

The procession was then formed in the following manner:

Gate City Band.

Veterans

Carriage containing Col. Morehead, the speaker and Mrs. Stedman and Miss Stedman.

The president, Mrs. Dalton, and Mrs. A. M. Scales, Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Broadnax were in the next carriage.

Then followed the young ladies of the Guilford Chapter, in Confederate colors, carrying flowers.

The Dixie, Protector and Southside hose wagons filled with children; the Hook and Ladder truck and steamer. "Gen. Greene."

The services at the cemetery were beautiful and impressive.

After the exercises had been concluded at the cemetery the Duughters of the Confederacy served a dainty luncheon on the Academy of Music lawn to the veterans.

Cotton Spinners Meeting in Charlotte.

The fourth annual meeting of the Southern Cotton Spinners' Association convened in Charlotte today. Representative mill men who practically control cotton manufacturing in the United States are in attendance, and the meeting is said to be the greatest and most important textile convention ever held in this country. The Charlotte Observer says the capitol represented in the aggregation is not less than $600,000,000.

Greensboro is represented in the meeting by Messrs. Ceasar and W. H. Cone, and E. T. Garsed, of the Proximity Manufacturing Company, and J. S. and T. A. Hunter and C. H. Williams, of the Hunter Manufacturing and Commission Company. Mr. W. L. Williams, the Southern representative of the latter concern, will come up from Atlanta.

Our wash skirts are beautiful and Friday will be a lucky day for you, if you want to buy one. J. M. Hendrix & Co. m9-3t

Address—"The Development of Electric Driving," Sidney B. Paine, of Boston, Mass.

It is greatly regretted by the local promoters that the Chinese Minister could not be present but the programme as it now stands is made up of the very best that can be obtained in the entire United States, every speaker being an authority on the subject which he discusses.

The graduating class of the graded school will have a picnic tomorrow. Prof. Bivens, the teacher of the class, will accompany them to the grounds and have the outing in charge. The class has completed its regular work and are ending up their ten years course in the most pleasant manner possible.

Sheriff Wallace says that the negro, Mack Fesperman, who is to hang here on May 31st, is as usual claiming a very bright religious experience as his lot, but he is appearing rather sick, says the sheriff. Fesperman murdered his wife here some months ago through jealousy.

The death of Ed. De Bruhl, the negro fireman, yesterday was a very sad occurrence. The negro had been right badly hurt at the cotton fire in the morning and is said to have been drinking for several days. When the alarm went off accidentally the negro started down to the reel room, but fell on the steps and received his death injuries. He had been a familiar figure here for a number of years as Dr. McComb's driver.

WILL SUE FOR THEIR WAGES.

COMPLAINT IS NOW BEING DRAWN.

The Late Employees of the Proximity Manufacturing Company Will Ask for $90,000---Several Attorneys Employed to Prosecute the Case---Making Efforts to Vacate the Houses and Secure Employment Elsewhere.

The employees of the Proximity Manufacturing Company, who were discharged Monday morning, have taken steps to enter suit against the company for the remainder of their wages for this year, amounting in the aggregate to $90,000.

This statement is made on the authority of Mr. J. C. Meekins, Jr., one of the attorneys employed to represent the discharged employees. Other lawyers have also been employed in the case, and the complaint is now being drawn. When this work is completed the papers will be served on the company and a preliminary hearing had. One of the attorneys says they are anxious to get into court with the matter, feeling that they have a strong case.

The Telegram is told that no attempt will be made to coerce the Proximity Manufacturing Company, either by threats or violence. The instructions of Mr. Cone, so far as his and his company's rights are concerned, will be followed. To this end the people are now making efforts to vacate the houses and secure employment elsewhere. The large number of people living at Proximity, the greater part of whom are in sympathy with the union, will make this task necessarily slow, and some of them may be unable to secure homes right away.

Those of the employees whom the Telegram has heard express themselves use no harsh terms in speaking of Mr. Cone or any other person connected with the company, nor does any member of the company speak harshly of the employees.

DISTRICT PRESIDENT HERE.

A Mr. Bell, from Lexington, president of the Textile Union in this district, is here to look after the interests of the discharged employees. He stated to the Telegram that the men bear no ill will against the Proximity Manufacturing Company or any one connected with it. Their only desire is to have the mills re-opened and the employees reinstated. They make no demands or threats. He stated that the company had agreed to take back all employees who would pledge themselves to have nothing to do with the union. The men declare that they will never do this.

It is also stated that some of the surrounding mills, notably in Durham, have been notified to employ no people from Proximity, and that some have been discharged for this reason.

The discharged employees have a committee whose business it is to look after those who may be in needy circumstances. This is done with funds from the union.

NO BACKERS FOR CORBETT.

The General Opinion is That the Old Champion Will go Down.

By Wire to the Telegram.

New York, May 10—There is very little betting on the Jeffries-Corbett fight. The general opinion is that Jeffries will knock out the old champion. None of the heavy betters have showed up yet. Brady offered to bet Considine a thousand to five thousand. Considine offered to bet five thousand to ten thousand that Jeffries would not best Jim in ten rounds. Brady only said that he did not want an easy thing like that.

THE DENTISTS.

A Pleasant and Profitable Session of the Society.

At last night's session of the State Dental Society Dr. C. A. Rominger's paper on "A Plea for Conservatism" was discussed.

Dr. J. M. Fleming, of Raleigh, read a paper on "Causes Which Tend to Lower the Profession."

At this morning's session it was decided to abandon the clinic.

An interesting paper on "Prosthetic Dentistry" was read by Dr. E. K. Wright, of Wilson. This was followed by a general discussion. The subject of "Oral Surgery" was also discussed.

MAJOR STEDMAN'S ADDRESS.

fighting qualities.

In front of Lane and Cooke the enemy had felled trees, sharpening the limbs and making it very difficult to get through them. McRae had an open field between him and the enemy's breastworks and for this reason, as the other two brigades would be necessarily retarted by the abattis, which was exceedingly formidable where Lane's men had to pass, they were ordered to advance somewhat sooner than MacRae's men. MacRae's line of battle was in the edge of a pine thicket, about three hundred yards from the breastworks to be assaulted. Walking along the line MacRae told the men that he knew they would go over the works, and that he wished them to do so without firing a gun. "All right, General; we will go there," was the answer which came from all. The men were in high spirits, jesting and laughing, and ready to move on an instant's notice. In the meanwhile Lane's and and Cooke's brigades advancing, were received by a heavy fire of both musketry and artillery. As the firing became more violent, especially in front of Lane, MacRae, prompted by that great and magnanimous spirit which ever characterized him, and realizing that the crisis of the conflict was at hand, said to Captain Louis G. Young, his Adjutant General; "I shall wait no longer for orders, Lane is drawing the entire fire of the enemy, give the order to advance at once." Hitherto his brigade had received but slight attention from the enemy, the greater portion of their fire having been directed against Lane's and Cooke's brigades. But warned of the danger which threatened them, by the loud cheers from MacRae's brigade, as it emerged from its covering of pines and advanced to the assault, they opened a tremenduous fire of small arms, with a covering fire of artillery along McRae's whole front. It was all in vain. MacRae's men, in a line almost as straight and unbroken as they presented when on parade, without firing a gun, threw themselves forward at a double-quick, and mounting the entrenchments, precipitated themselves amongst the enemy's infantry on the other side, who seemed to be dazed by the vehemence of the attack, and made a feeble resistance after their works were reached. Lane's and Cooke's men, stimulated by the shouts of McRae's brigade on their right, redoubled their exertions and advancing with great rapidity through the fallen timber, were close under the works when McRae struck them. In fact, portions of the three brigades crossed the embankment together, and the glory of the victory belongs eqaully to them all. Nor were our cavalry idle spectators of the fight. As soon as it was evident to General Hampton that Hill's infantry had commenced the second assault with the three North Carolina brigades, he ordered his entire force, which had been dismounted, to attack the enemy in flank and rear. This was done most gallantly and successfully. General Rufus Barringer, of North Carolina, commanded W. H. F. Lee's division with marked skill and gallantry, whilst Col. W. H. Cheek, of Warren county, led Barringer's brigade with his accustomed dash. The cavalry vied with the infantry in their headlong assault upon the enemy's lines. The 2nd N. C. cavalry, under General W. P. Roberts, of Gates county, carried the first line of rifle pits on the right, and the cavalry all swept over the main line. Their works stormed in front, their lines carried in flank and rear, the enemy's infantry gave way at all points and abandoned the field in confusion and without any appearance of order. In truth, the Federal infantry did not show the determination which had generally marked the conduct of Hancock's corps. Not so with the Federal artillery. It was fought to the last with unflinching courage. Some minutes before the second assault was made, General McRae had ordered Lieut. W. E. Kyle, with the sharp-shooters, to concentrate his fire upon the Federal batteries. Many men and horses rapidly fell under the deadly fire of these intrepid marksmen. Yet still the artillerists who were left stood by their guns. When MacRae's brigade crossed the embankment, a battery which was on his right front as he advanced, wheeled to a right angle with its original position and opened a fire of grape and canister at close quarters, infilading the Confederate line. General MacRae immediately ordered this battery to be taken. Although entirely abandoned by its infantry support, it continued a rapid fire upon the attacking column until the guns were reached. Some of the gunners even then refused to surrender and were taken by sheer physical force. They were animated in their gallant conduct by the example of their commanding officer. On horseback, he was a conspicuous target, and his voice could be distinctly heard encouraging his men. Struck with admiration by his bravery, every effort was made by General MacRae, Capt. W. P. Oldham, of Wilmington, Captain Robert Bingham, and one or two others, who were amongst the first to reach the guns, to save the life of this manly opponent. Unfortunately he was struck by a ball which came from the extreme flank, as all firing had ceased in front of him, and he fell from his horse mortally wounded, not more lamented by his own men than by those who combatted him. This battery, when captured, was at once turned upon the retreating columns of the enemy. It was manned by a few of MacRae's sharp-shooters, all of whom were trained in artillery practice. They were aided by Captain Oldham, Lieut. Kyle, and others not now remembered. Captain Oldham sighted one of the guns repeatedly, and when he saw the effect of his accurate aim upon the disordered masses in front, was so jubilant that General MacRae, with his usual quiet humor, remarked, "Oldham thinks he is at a ball in Petersburg."

No description of the battle at Ream's Station would be fair or just, which failed to notice the Confederate artillery, commanded by Col. Pegram. Some of his guns were toward the left of the Confederate line, whilst others had been firing from a position slightly to the right and rear of MacRae's brigade previous to the final assault. As soon as notified that the advance was about to be made, he did what he, Haskell and Pelham had often done on other fields, but which hithsrto in war had been seldom done, and never except by artillerists of rare courage and self-reliance. He ordered all his guns to the right and rear of MacRae to advance to the front line of battle held by the infantry, and to unlimber and commence firing at close musketry range. That charge of Pegram's artillery, for so it might well be called, was a sight worthy of the painter's highest art. Through an open field covered here and there by a growth of small pines, came his artillery, the horses at a full gallop. As they approached nearer to MacRae's brigade, the infantry recognized in advance of the guns, and riding side by side, were those two unequalled and fearless artillery officers—Col. Pegram, of Virginia, and Lieut. J. C. Haskell, of South Carolina, always excepting Pelham, who deserved, to rank fully with them. MacRae's brigade greeted them with loud cheers, for they knew that the'r presence meant that they would have the aid of the artillery to the end of the conflict. Haskell had volunteered for this conflict and Pegram commanded. The kind feeling of MacRae's troops was reciprocated by Pegram's battalion, who felt that their guns could never be captured with MacRae to support them. In response to the cheers from his brigade, they cheered for North Carolina as they swept to the front, many of them throwing their hats in the air and leaving them as they passed. Straight on rode Pegram and Haskell, the guns close up to them, and the infantry cheering itself hoarse, as it saw the artillery halted within about two hundred and fifty yards of the enemy's line, from which distance an exceedingly rapid and well d rected fire was opened upon the breastworks. Whilst the loss sustained by the Federal troops from the artillery fire was not great, as they were protected to a large extent, yet they were badly demoralized, and hence when MacRae advanced, Hancock's men fired wildly and above the mark.

MAJOR STEDMAN'S ADDRESS.

When Ney's corps, assailed in front and flank by the Russian Imperial Guard at Friedland, was driven back and almost annihilated, Senarmont advanced his artillery to within half pistol shot of the Russian lines, swept the whole field of battle with his fire, and connected his name inseparably with the glory of that memorable field.

At Wagram, when McDonald with sixteen thousand men pierced the Austrian centre, and his column, reduced to fifteen hundred, had halted, the ladies of Vienna, who had climbed the roofs of the houses and watched with breathless emotion and throbbing hearts, the contest for the possession of their beautiful capital, thought the day was won, and thousands of them upon their bended knees blessed God for their deliverance.

But the hour had not yet come. The dial clock of fate had not yet struck. Drouet, with one hundred pieces of artillery, rode at full gallop to the front, over the dead and dying, and unlimbering his guns in advance of the French infantry, spread death far and wide amidst the Austrian ranks. McDonald again advanced and added another to the long list of victories won by Napoleon which startled the world by its splendor.

With eager joy the historian gilds his pages with these great achievements by artillery and lingers long over their recital. Can no son of the South be found to tell the deeds of Pegram, of Pelham and of Haskell, who reversed the ancient method of fighting with artillery at a long and safe distance, and brought it to its highest perfection, always advancing to the front line of battle when the occasion demanded?

The Federal loss in this battle was between 600 and 700 killed and wounded, 2,150 prisoners, 3,100 stand of small arms, 12 stands of colors, 9 guns and caissons. Amongst the prisoners captured was General Walker, of Hancock's staff, who surrendered to Lieutenant Kyle. Kyle here, as elsewhere, was in the very front of the assaulting column.

The Confederate loss was small, and fell principally upon Lane's brigade. In the second and final assault it was about 500 killed and wounded. The result of the brilliant engagement was hailed with great rejoicing throughout the South, and shed a declining lustre upon the Confederate battle-flag, upon which the sun of victory was about to go down forever.

From the best information I have been able to gather from those who were participants in the battle of Ream's Station, and whom I know to be worthy of entire reliance, I have endeavored to give a fair and impartial account of that engagement. I have omitted to mention very many acts of personal gallantry and the names of officers and men who especially distinguished themselves, as my limited time would not permit me to notice them all, and I did not wish to discriminate between the equally brave and heroic.

Even to General William MacRae I have not given that prominence to which his services entitled him. It has never been questioned that of all who were present in that fight, none contributed more to its glorious issue than did this splendid North Carolinian. He comprehended at a glance the situation. He realized its necessities, and when the movement had arrived, when the blow was to be struck which should make the triumph certain; he did not hesitate to assume the responsibility of not waiting for instructions for the advance of his brigade, but ordered it to that assault which shall link its name forever with the honor and glory of North Carolina.

If commemorative words were needed to perpetuate the fame of the Confederate soldier, I should be all unhappy today. But it is not so. The memory of General William MacRae and of those who, like him, made the flag of the South so stainless, will live, transmitted from generation to generation, when the costliest tombs erected by a nation's love shall have perished by decay and crumbled into dust.

With such defenders how could a cause have gone down in disaster and gloom? It ought to be accounted strange that this inquiry will find its way from your hearts. Yet it is sufficient for us to realize that God in his wisdom knew what was best, and that the methods by which he oftimes brings about the greatest blessings to a common humanity are neither to be questioned nor can they be fathomed, until to him it seems fit, that light be given.

Was it all to no purpose that your kinsmen died in the red glare of battle or perished amidst the festering horrors of the hospital; that squalid poverty and hideous want stalked as spectres through your desolated fields; that a mortal agony filled your hearts and that you drank of the cup of bitterness to its dregs? All this sad lesson will yet be made plain, either to you or to your own children. Suffering is necessary to make up a great character to its fullness. No man or woman, unless by special providence of God, can live in the unbroken sunshine of plenty of prosperity without developing to a greater or less degree selfishness in some of its many monstrous forms, and being debarred from reaching the highest state of excellence to which their natures might aspire. It is from sacrificial flames that have arisen the noblest and grandest spirits, which have shed a halo of glory around humanity.

It may not seem proper for me to make this prediction, but I do so with a reverent love for all portions of this great Republic. The day will come, though I trust it may be far distant, when the intentions and ideas of the founders of this government will be disregarded by those who, in the wild greed for money amidst the dissolute luxury, engendered by vast accumulation of wealth, have forgotten the teachings of purer and better days; and the very existence of a constitutional form of government, as framed by our ancestors, will be in jeopardy. Then will be found amongst a people regenerated by fire and blood, that high and broad and lofty patriotism, which shall constitute them the strongest, safest and best defenders of the land of our fathers in its entirety. And as the suffering and oppressed of every land and every clime shall still turn their steadfast gaze towards this Western Hemisphere, they will rise up and call you blessed.

RHEUMATISM—CATARRAH—DISEASES CURED BY B. B. B.

It is the deep-seated, obstinate cases of catarrh and rheumatism that B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) cures. It matters not what other treatments, doctors, sprays, liniments, medicated air, blood purifiers, have failed to do, B. B. B. always promptly reaches the real cause and roots out and drives from the bones, joints, mucuous membrane, and entire system the specific poison in the blood that causes rheumatism and catarrh. B. B. B. is the only remedy strong enough to do this and cure ond so there can never be a return to the symptoms. Don't give up hope, but try B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) or 3 Bs.

For sale by druggists and Howard Gardner, in Greensboro, at $1 per large bottle, or 6 large bottles (full treatment) $5. To prove our faith in B. B. B. we will send a trial bottle free to sufferers, so they may test the remedy at our expense. Address Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga.

WE ARE ORIGINATORS.

Not Imitators!

White Delivery Wagons have been a distinguishing mark of the Greensboro Steam Laundry for a number of years. Our customers have learned to "look out for the white wagons."

Competitors have seen fit to imitate our wagons, therefore we deem it wise to make a change.

Our wagons are now in the shop. About May 1st they will come out green, our future color. In the mean time would respectfully request our friends and patrons to BEWARE of the white laundry wagons and see to it that the right driver gets the bundle. To avoid any possible confusion, in futurr our wagons will be lettered;

Dick's Greensboro Steam Laundry

Biggest and Best.

THE GATE CITY STEAM LAUNDRY is now prepared to do all kinds of laundry in the very best style. Having recently put in a large new mangle with a lot of other new machinery we can afford to do your work as cheap as can be done anywhere and guarantee entire satisfaction. We have also changed our wagons from green and red to white—they are not old wagons painted over, so please note the change and watch for the WHITE WAGONS—they will not hurt you and see that your laundry goes to THE GATE CITY, THE BIGGEST AND BEST,

The woman who puts her head in the lion's mouth, seems the type of reckless women. But she isn't. The really reckless woman is the one who braves Nature day after day, by neglect of the health of the delicate womanly organs. "Crime and punishment blossom on one stem" says Emerson. When the cycle of self-neglect is complete it includes the pains and sufferings which are the inevitable penalties inflicted by outraged Nature. The drain which today is counted an inconvenience, becomes in succeeding days a horrible and offensive stigma. The passing depression of an hour grows into a permanent melancholy.

The timely use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will save young women from suffering, as it will cure those who through neglect have become martyrs after marriage. No woman who suffers with backache, pain in the side, bearing down pains, debilitating drains, ulceration or inflammation, should delay another day the use of "Favorite Prescription." Its use helps every woman and heals ninety-eight per cent. of all who give it a fair trial. It contains no opium, cocaine or other narcotic.

"I was tempted to try your medicines after seeing the effect upon my mother," writes Mrs. Flora Arn, of Dallas, Jackson Co., Mo. "At an early stage of married life I was greatly bothered with painful periods, also a troublesome drain which rendered me very weak and unfit for work of any kind. I became so thin there was nothing left of me but skin and bone. My husband became alarmed and got me a bottle of 'Favorite Prescription.' After he saw the wonderful effects of that one he got me two more, and after I used those up there was no more pain, and I began to gain in flesh very rapidly. I believe I weigh twice as much as I did then, and can do all of my work. I think I owe all praise to Dr. Pierce and his wonderful curative medicines."

Doctor Pierce's Pellets are specially adapted to the needs of delicate women.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 9 1900.

MEMORIAL DAY.

May 10th has been set apart as the day in which our people shall decorate the graves of our dead. It should become as fixed a day in our calendar as is the 4th of July. Never was there a people to whom their dead should be more dear, for never were there more noble dead, and never had a people more to be proud of. The Southern people ought to be hero worshipers, for they have heroes to worship. We believe in hero worship; it is enobling. It makes a people better; it lifts them from the sordid considerations of the hour and feasts their souls in contemplation upon characters that have done something for the world, and human life is richer and better of such contemplation. Let it go on; teach it to the rising generation.

Not an undeserved tribute has today been paid our fallen heroes in all the the Southland, where memory reigns and hearts well up. In coming years—when men search the pages of history for devotion and valor and constancy, they will find no more luminous pages than those that treat of the South in the sixties. Memorial day! Yes, indeed, teach the coming generations to cherish the memory of their fathers; teach them to understand and appreciate the cause for which they fought and died; teach them to love as their fondest possessions the memory of hero fathers. A people without pride in ancestry is a people without ambition, and a people without ambition is little removed from the brute creation.

We have said that the recollections and the influences of the Old South would operate upon the new to keep it from becoming a commercialized section. But if we would have this so we must not forget. We must keep our memorial days, and we must instil into the hearts of the young a love and reverence for the old things and a knowledge of them, keep green the graves of the dead, and vivify the pages of history and the stories of tradition for the minds of our children.

It is with pleasure that we present the memorial address of Maj. Chas. M. Stedman. There is no man in North Carolina who more happily combines eloquence with chaste and ornate language than Maj. Stedman. The Southern people are to be congratulated that there yet remain among them, here and there, men, who, like Maj. Stedman, can so haply tell of the events in which they bore a part, and fitly pay tribute to the illustrious dead.

The Telegram is gratified to appear in a new form today. However, we must beg the patience of our readers a little longer till the new machinery gets to working well and the force becomes accustomed to the change. We expect to offer some still further improvements, both for our readers and advertisers. With the change of form advertisers have a much better chance, as all space in the paper is equally conspicuous. We shall soon be in a position to offer the merchants of Greensboro the best facilities they have ever had for reaching the people. In the meanwhile we beg a little indulgence for various shortcomings, such as being late, and the thousand and one little things that always occur until our office is in running-easy shape.

PEOPLE IN TOWN.

Coming and Going of Memorial Day Visitors.

Mr. W. B. Hill spent last night here and went South this morning.

Mrs. M. B. Scott, of Mebane, is visiting Mrs. Dr. George A. Mebane.

Mr. Reuben D. Reid, of Wentworth, spent last night in the city.

Judge R. W. Winston came up from Durham yesterday evening on business.

Messrs. J. S. McAlister and W. R. Walker, of Spray, were here last night.

Miss Fannie Andrews, of Cocoa, Fla., arrived today on a short visit to her cousin, Miss Mozelle Adams.

Dr. L. T. Smith, of Reidsville, one of the visiting dentists, is stopping with his cousin, Mr. W. T. Smith.

Mrs. Gaston W. Ward will give a social this evening complimentary to the Epworth League of Spring Garden chapel.

Maj. Joe E. Alexander, of Winston, District Attorney Holton's law partner, spent last night and this morning in the city.

Mr. A. M. Smith, of Raleigh, the contractor who paved Davie street, was here today, leaving on this afternoon's train for Sanford.

Mrs. W. T. Harris and Miss Gray Morehead came over from Danville yesterday and are the guests of Mrs. B. Frank Mebane.

Miss Mebane Entertains in Honor of Her Guest.

Miss Berta Mebane entertained a number of her friends yesterday afternoon from 5 to 7 in honor of her guest, Mrs. Lutcliffe, of Newark, N. J. Those who were so fortunate as to receive cards to this "At Home" knew that a great pleasure was in store for them, as Miss Mebane enjoys the enviable reputation of being an ideal hostess, whose entertainments are always delightful. The color scheme on this occasion was white and green, and in the parlors and hall dogwood and white roses carried out the idea. The dining room was fragrant and beautiful with lillies of the valley and carnations. The table was covered with handsome Battenburg lace pieces over green, with the lilies arranged in pyramid effect in the center. In this attractive room Mrs. Ellington and Mrs. Porter presided. The guests were received in the hall by Miss Walker Fry and Miss Irwing Scales, and in the parlor by Mrs. Lutcliffe and Miss Mebane. Mrs. Lutcliffe was handsomely gowned in white silk with chiffon trimmings, and carried American beauties. Miss Mebane wore a dainty and becoming costume of white organdy over silk.

Among those present were: Mrs. Lindheim, Mrs. Cone, Mr. Ellington, Mrs. Porter, Mrs. Barringer, Mrs. Glenn, Mrs. Macgill, Mrs. Welch, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. McKenzie, Mrs. Devin, Mrs. Holt, Mrs. Menefee, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Gayle, Mrs. Battle, Mrs. Sam Boyd, Mrs. Brooks, and Misses Kase, Porter, Staples, Small, Bernard, Shober, Crow, Holt, O'Brien, Goolsby and Sloan.

Oratorical Contest at Guilford.

The annual oratorical contest of the Websterian Literary Society of Guilford College will take place in the auditorium in Memorial Hall Friday, May 11th, 7:30 p. m. These public exercises mark the close of a most successful and useful year's work of this society. Six young men will contest for a prize with orations of their own composition. The prize given is a most practical and useful one, being a Webster's International Dictionary and stand. Several pieces of music will add variety to the program. Miss Elsie Weatherly, of Greensboro, will be present and favor the audience with some selections on the violin. The orators prize will be delivered by Prof. Smoot, of the Greensboro Female College. Prof. Whitsett, of Whitsett Institute, will deliver the improvement prize. A cordial invitation is extended the public.

Death in Robeson County.

Mr. C. S. Ray died last night at his home at Antioch, in Robeson county, after an illness of some duration. He was the father of Mrs. J. M. Love and Mr. J. B. Ray, of this city.

The news of his death was received here this morning after hisson had left on the excursion for Mt Airy. He was called back from Rural Hall, and this afternoon he and Mrs. Love left for the late home of their father to attend the funeral tomorrow.

Circuit Court Next Week.

A special term of the United States Circuit Court will convene in this city next Tuesday with Judge Charles H. Simonton presiding. There is much business to come before the court and it may be a three week's term.

There are a number of important cases on the docket, one of which is the suit brought by the Hopkins Place Savings Bank of Baltimore against Mt. Airy township. This is in regard to some bonds repudiated by the township. Several big damage suits against the Southern Railway will also come up at this term.

The Eagles Elect Officers.

At a meeting of Eagle Hose Company, No. 7, held last night, officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President—H. J. Elam.
Captain—R. C. Whittington.
First Lieutenant—J. R. McClamroch.
Secretary—Harry Poezolt.
Assistant Secretary—H. C. Curtiz.
Treasurer—J. L. Thacker.
Auditing Committee—E. L. Clarke, J. R. Wilson and H. J. Elam.
Trustees—R. C. Whittington, W. L. Cranford and J. L. Thacker.

As usual, this company's affairs are in good condition and the members enthusiastic. The fire department has no more important set of members than the Eagle boys, and they deserve all they get.

A Suit in Equity

The Computing Scales Company, of Springfield, Ohio, has instituted a suit in equity against Mr. S. E. Hudson, one of Greensboro's prominent grocers, the process being issued yesterday by the clerk of the United States Court at this place.

It is claimed that Mr. Hudson is using a set of computing scales which infringe on a patent owned by the Computing Scales Company. The suit is brought against Mr. Hudson for convenience, it is supposed, as it would be more difficult to reach the company manufacturing the scales.

Primrose and Dockstader's Minsterls.

When Primrose & Dockstader's Big New Minstrel Company in its mammoth canvas theatre comes here on Saturday, May 12th, on corner Forbis and Sycamore streets, it will have some of the best comedians and singers above the footlights. The company is said to have a program of many novelties, a resplendent stage setting, magnificent costumes and a goodly number of clever artists whose reputations in several instances are far famed. The theatre itself will be a novelty as it is the first complete auditorium and stage ever erected under canvas, containing all the accommodations nowadays furnished in an up-to-date opera house. Two performances will be given daily, afternoon at 2 p. m. and evening at 8 p. m., rain or shine. Look for the great street parade at noon.

RED ROUGH SKIN.

If there is anything a woman is proud of or rather delights in it's a smooth, clear, blemishless skin. Sometimes this is a little hard to produce, but a great many of our women customers are speaking words of praise for

Cream Of ROSE AND ALMOND

They are safe in doing this, as it is an ideal skin food. For chaps, cracks, rough skin or any irritation of the skin it is very effective. You will find it just what you've been loooking for.

Wonderful Fish.

Assuming that we are walking on the ocean bottom at the depth of over a mile, we move cautiously along in water icy cold and suddenly are confronted with a blaze of light and find ourselves in a field of light givers. Imagine a cornfield with stalks from two to four feet in height, the tips gleaming with light and waving gently to and fro. Such an appearance the fields of umbellularia present.

Above this forest of living lights strange and weird fish are passing which we recognize as forms that have been dredged from great depths by the Albatross, the Challenger and others. One, the chiasmodon, dashes by emitting light from its own body, and, wonder of wonders! we see it seize a fish five times its own bulk and draw itself over it like a glove. Its jaws by a special arrangement separate, and the mouth is a cavern of india rubber-like possibilities. A similar fish, malacosteus, is of a rich black velvet hue, and as it poises we see upon its head two large lights. One emits a golden light, the other throws out fitful green rays which have some hidden meaning in the economy of nature. Some of the fish seem to be literal mouths. Such is the eurypharnyx, or pelican fish. The mouth is enormous, the bones of the jaw being attached to the skull by movable joints, so that it has enormous powers of distension.—Professor Charles F. Holder.

The "Needle's Eye."

A lady writes to me and asks what is really meant by the "needle's eye" in the parable of the rich man. I remember reading somewhere that it was the smallest gate that gave entrance to the walled city of Jerusalem and that a loaded camel had to be stripped of its burden and bend its knees to squeeze through. And so a rich man had to give up his riches and come to his knees before he could enter heaven. It was just one of the thousand proverbs that adorned the moral teachings of the Jews and the eastern nations. The writings of Job and Solomon and Confucius and Mohammed abound in them.

In the Koran is found this proverb, "The impious man will find the gates of heaven shut, and he can no more enter than a camel can pass through a needle's eye." There is another in the Koran which says, "You will never see a palm tree of gold nor an elephant pass through a needle's eye." These proverbs simply meant that it was impossible. Strange to say, the world has long since quit making proverbs.

All proverbs have come down to us, even such as "A rolling stone gathers no moss." "Poor Richard" left us a few, such as "A penny saved is twopence gained."—Bill Arp in Atlanta Constitution.

Like the Rest of Us.

"George, dear," she said a night or two before the wedding, "do you think it possible that our love and our married life can become the commonplace, coldly practical love and life of the married people we see around us? Oh, George, my heart would break if I thought so!"

"But it will not be so," said George passionately. "We love each other too tenderly, too fondly for that. Our love is not of the ordinary kind, my darling, and our lives will not be so. Ah, no, no, my angel; that can never be!"

And the other day she said: "I say, George, how would you like pork for dinner with apple sauce? You would? All right, then, and don't you forget that feeding bottle for the baby or I'll send you back after it, and mind that you don't keep dinner waiting."

And he, with a falling off of the passion of ten years ago, replied: "All right, Lou, and I wish you'd sew a button on the back part of those striped trousers of mine. You'll find them hanging over a chair in our room. Don't have the pork as dry as last time, and you watch the baby's cold. That watering of the eyes looks like measles to me. Goodby."—Pearson's Magazine.

"Off" For "Of."

I always say "I bought it off Jones," and up to now, through so constantly hearing people, my late father included (he always used to pronounce coffee as corffee), talk in this way, thought it was right. Still this would be only in conversation. Writing to any one, saying I had bought anything, I should put "of Jones" or "from Jones." I suppose "from Jones" would be perfectly correct.

I have heard this form of speech in many different parts of the country, but most frequently, I think, in and near Liverpool.

The use of "off" for "of" and "off of" is common in the north of England.—Notes and Queries.

Tools and Progress.

Despite all the attacks upon machinery, an age without tools is an age of drudgery and degradation. If once men toiled 16 hours a day, with a single stroke Watt's engine cut off two hours in the morning for rest and two hours at night for reading. The modern home, with a thousand and one comforts, is the gift of tools. We now compel steel fingers, steel knives, steel wheels and steel wires to do our work. Take away our tools and civilization would go back 100 years.—Newell Dwight Hillis in Woman's Home Companion.

is where we stand in the lumber business. At the kicking post, as it were, in regard to prices.

First comes the owner of the timber. He just woke up to the value of it and wants double last year's prices. Then the sawmill man. He has not been making a fortune and thinks now he should share a little in the general prosperity

They say to us: "We must have so much for our trees and work." After a while it is "up to you." Don't kick. You don't suppose we have nerve enough to put up prices unless they had first been put up on us. No, indeed. But prices are NOT high. They have been to low and are just now getting reasonable. Your children will be glad to build at double the price it now costs you. It is a trite, but true saying, if you want to build, "Now is the time."

A Loud Whistle.

A clergyman in Scotland desired his hearers never to call one another "liars," but when any one said "the thing that was not" they ought to whistle.

One Sunday he preached a sermon on the parable of the loaves and fishes, and being at a loss to explain it said the loaves were not like those nowadays—they were as big as some of the hills of Scotland.

He had scarcely pronounced these words when he heard a loud whistle.

"Wha's that ca's me a liar?"

"It is I, Willy Macdonald, the baker."

"Well, Willy, what objection ha' ye to what I ha' told you?"

"None, sir, only I want to know what sort of ovens they had to bake those loaves in?"

A Chicago Street Car Episode.

Passengers on an east bound Archer avenue car were thrown into a panic one night by the prospect of a holdup. At the sight of a wild eyed man jerking the bell rope and flourishing a huge revolver timid women sought shelter behind brave men.

Quiet was restored when the real cause of the disturbance was learned. Car 1811 had been about to cross the switch tracks at Ashland avenue when the conductor asked the man for his fare. He took a $5 bill and was about to make change when he saw the warning lights ahead.

"Wait a moment," he said and darted ahead with his lantern.

"Stop the car!" roared the excitable passenger, who saw the conductor and his $5 disappearing down the track. "He's got my money!"

The would be "holdup" man had reached the front door when the car flashed past the conductor, who was waiting for the rear platform. The passenger tried to jump from the car, but found it impossible because of the Archer avenue bridge structure. Then he made a mad dash for the rear door, where the conductor met him with a polite "Don't forget your change, sir."—Chicago Record.

Water In Porto Rico.

The water supply of Porto Rico, because of its abundance and freshness from the mountain streams, ought to be pure and good for use. But it is far otherwise. A thick bed of rank vegetation is ever decaying beneath the new growth rising above it, and the water filtering through the rotten mass becomes not only steeped with the lye of decaying roots, leaves and grasses, but is full of insects and worms.
